A POPULAR FAMILY. JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always com to catch on to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know: I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting.

without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lafargo descrited her Delsarte class as suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction; I heard you felling Tommy Rames last evening how one club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest fads, and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last menth you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of the way place?—for you never go to the city.

KATE: 'Why, Jennie, you will make me vail. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I yery seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me full information on the subject. Magic? No! Maguzine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it cally furnishes the reading for the whole household: father has given up his magazine shall be hus taken for years, as he says this out gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a funous he, 'updecoper. In fact, we all agree that it is the offly reality FAMILY magazine published, as we have sort for amples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and industry in the one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and industry in the one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and industry in the suits and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and industry in any praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, sond it cents to be publisher.
